

Photo credit: PHOTO CREDIT: THE UNSKILLED BOY

READ ARTS & CULTURE PEOPLE

16-year-old with autism holding an art exhibition in August

The exhibition will showcase a collection of 30 artworks by Alexandros Julian Lim and half of the exhibition sales will be donated to the Cat Welfare Society.

Sitoh Shanice

Dances in her free time and can also lick her elbow.

Published: 28 June 2021, 1:04 PM

A 16-year-old teenager with autism is holding an exhibition called I Am Alex from Aug 16 to Aug 29.

It will be the first exhibition for the teenager, Alexandros Julian Lim, also known as Alex. The exhibition will be held at StudioNeon at 32 Haji Lane and will present a collection of 30 artworks. There will also be a virtual exhibition.

The art pieces are categorised into Abstract, Bugs & Animals, and Objects/Nature/People.

The paintings in I am Alex are inspired by everyday things and emotions and are painted and drawn in 20x26x2cm primed linen canvas with a 2cm depth.

Alex has teased on his website that there might be special large paintings in the collection as well.

Each 20x26x2cm painting is sold at $55 with free delivery and half of the exhibition sales will be donated to the Cat Welfare Society.

The society was chosen by Alex due to his love for cats. He is also an owner of two cats which have been with him since he was six years old.

His artwork has been shared and viewed positively from the general public on his facebook page and some of his pieces have already been sold. PHOTO CREDIT: FACEBOOK/THEUNSKILLEDBOY

On his website, Alex said that he has loved to draw and paint since he was little and painting gives him a lot of joy. He also hopes that his paintings will bring joy to buyers.

You may like these

READ ARTS & CULTURE
Book Review: The Paper Menagerie and Other Stories by Ken Liu

READ ARTS & CULTURE
Soaring through the Paper Roof

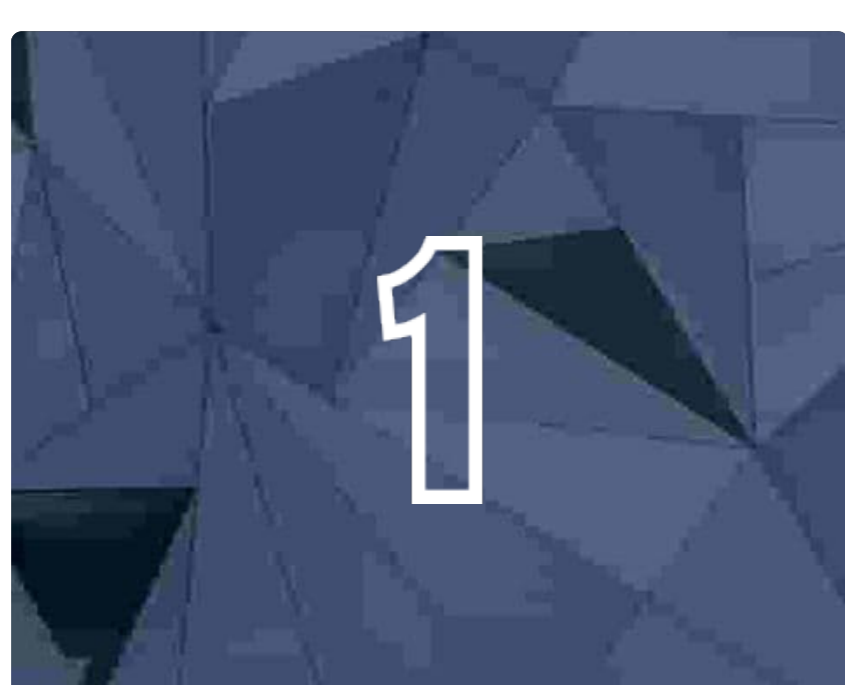

READ ARTS & CULTURE
Foo Fang Rong on growing up as a child actress

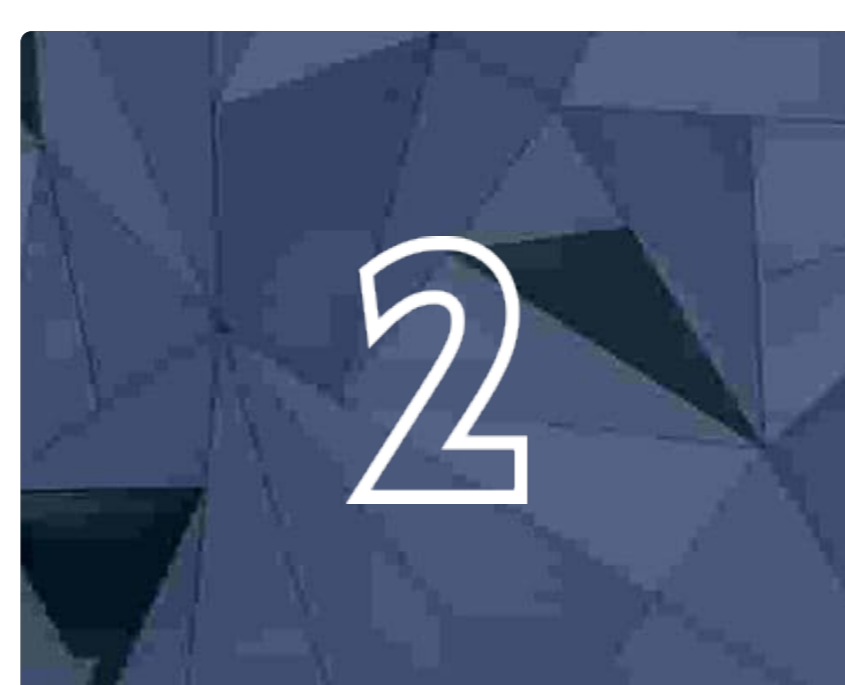

READ ARTS & CULTURE
Series Review: Monsters at Work is a nostalgic trip and fills in some gaps left by the original movie

Trending

PEOPLE
Out of the woods: A 19-year-old Singaporean's solo backpacking journey

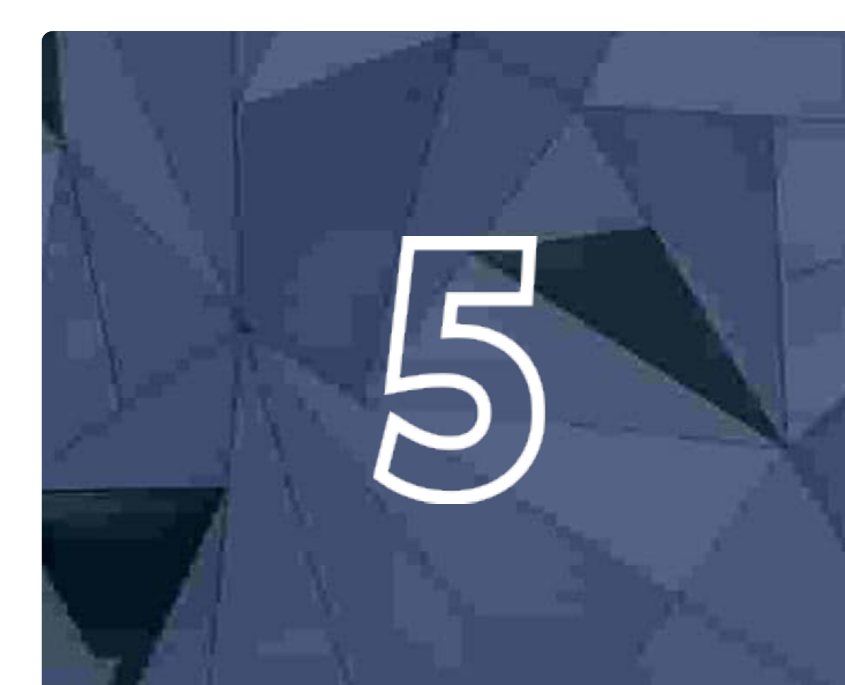

CAREER
How to slay an internship

ADULTING
Greetings to make elders love you this Chinese New Year

FASHION
Cable ties are now a fashion statement that cost over $500

THINGS TO DO
Fun things to do at a sleepover with your friends

